Chaperone mRNA Secondary Structure & GroEL C-Terminal Tail Shortening

Thermal Adaptation in Bacterial Chaperones Acts on Disordered Protein Extensions Rather Than Transcript Folding

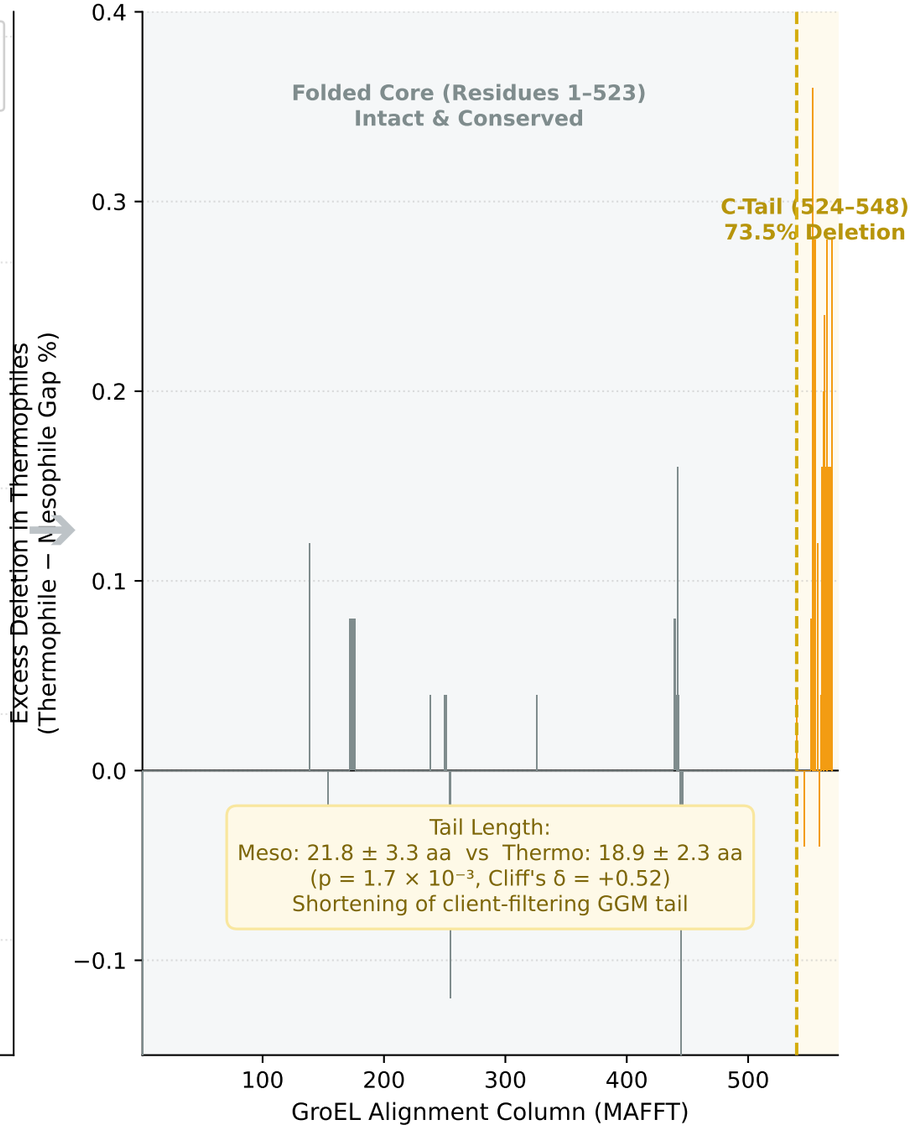

1. mRNA Secondary Structure

2. Coding Sequence Shortening

3. GroEL C-Terminal Tail Truncation

Summary: Bacterial chaperone mRNA structure does not track thermal niche; instead, GroEL selectively shortens its disordered C-terminal peptide tail.